

WeAreAllEssential Rapidly Becoming a Force to be Reckoned with Across Canada

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
June 24, 2021

Not only has this business empowerment network supported more small businesses than any other coalition to open up fully and stay open, they have been integral to two of the foremost legal actions currently underway.

Adamson's Barbecue, one of WAAE's founding members is positioned to challenge The Reopening Ontario Act like none other, thanks in part to Founder Vladislav Sobolev, who connected Adam Skelly with Chris Weisdorf, currently assisting Skelly's legal team with game-changing evidence and experts.

On the west coast, WeAreAllEssential has been actively supporting BC's proposed constitutional class action put forth by The Canadian Society for the Advancement of Science in Public Policy. Sobolev was responsible for making some integral connections in its early stages and also played a key role in spearheading a cease and desist letter presented to health authorities, law enforcement and policy makers. This letter has put critical pressure on all those that might perpetuate these unjustified measures to stand down.

WeAreAllEssential is currently supporting 1340 members and growing daily. It empowered hundreds of businesses to open up & stay open nation wide with its February 11th kick-off and hundreds more quickly followed suit with its second wave of re-openings April 1st. Some of its notable members include Teresa Heron of HUF Gym, Zach Boissinot of A Foot Above Fitness and Jamie Russo of Pushing Inc. Tattoo Emporium. Today, WeAreAllEssential officially announced its third wave of re-openings to be rolled out the week of Canada Day: June 28th-July 4th.

WeAreAllEssential is committed to re-opening the country fully and will not stop until we Make Canada Free Again.

To learn more about WeAreAllEssential's small business support network, success stories and legal action currently underway, visit www.WeAreAllEssential.ca